ADRIENNE RICH (1929-2012): A CELEBRATION OF HER POETRY

ADRIENNE RICH (1929-2012) was one of the greatest poets of her generation, and a major voice of 20th-century poetry. She extended her vision constantly; experimented with her craft, set herself fresh challenges in the exploration of a complex selfhood and relationship to the world, and its articulation. Her poetry and her activism, as a feminist and a lesbian, have inspired innumerable readers and activists around the world since the publication of her first book, A Change of World (1951) and her vocal participation in the civil rights protests of the late 1960s. Across a career that spanned six decades, Rich published more than 25 collections of poetry and nearly 12 books of prose: these include Necessities of Life, The Will to Change, Diving into the Wreck, and The Dream of a Common Language. Her literary achievements stand at the head of a powerful tradition of post-World War II American poetry, and resonate for Anglophone writers and readers everywhere. In the 12 May 2012 session of PEN@Prithvi, we will read, share and discuss poems from various phases of Adrienne Rich's career.

SUPERMEN OF MALEGAON

Directed by Faiza Ahmad Khan

Malegaon, a small town tucked away near the heart of India geographically, is fraught with communal tension and under economic depression. To escape the harsh reality of their world, its people seek refuge in the fantastical world of cinema.

This passion for cinema has spurred a group of cinema enthusiasts to make their own films-quirky, low budget, socially aware and notoriously funny spoofs of Bollywood films. Their ambition has grown and now they are ready to take on Hollywood and Superman.

The film follows them on this journey. At times funny, tragic, contemplative. Always warm and engaging. And as the film begins to take shape, through schemes and approaches that are sublimely ingenious, simply bizarre and purely hysterical, we also slowly discover Malegaon itself. The film is a tribute to a spirit that can never be vanquished, the spirit that enables The Supermen of Malegaon to make Malegaon's Superman.

MANTO

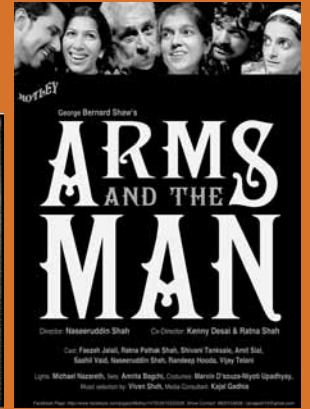

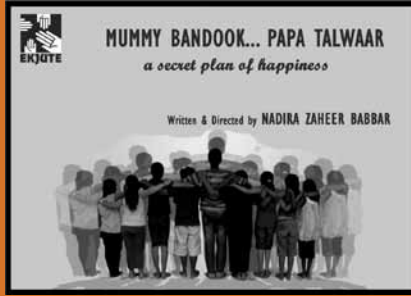

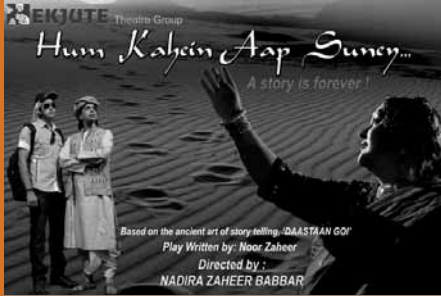

"From the jilted squalour and refuse of life, he picks out pearls. He enjoys digging in the refuse because he doesn't trust the luminaries of the world; he doesn't trust their brilliance or their judgement. He catches the thieves that lie in the hearts of their pure and respectable wives. And he compares them to the purity in the heart of a whore in a brothel." Says Ismat Apa about Manto.

Sadaat Hassan Manto canvas is splashed with colourful and controversial stories ranging from the partition to his involvement in the Indian film industry. Come join us as we celebrate his birth centenary by exploring the world of story telling through his writings.
